DIANA "B"

The Wildest of the Barrymores

At 32, Diana, maddest of the Barrymore madcaps has been through three husbands, including one serving a jail sentence for immoral traffic in women, any number of pseudo-public brawls, and more scandals than her Daddy Jack.

Yet in all this time she has yet to show a spark of the talent that first attracted public attention to the Barrymore name.

The name Barrymore, rather than an asset, has been like an albatross about her neck. An unwanted curse that seems to drive her to wilder and more depraved activity each year.

After her latest difficulty which found her the principal in a triangle seasoned with martinis, scotch, beer, and blood she confided to an unsurprised press that "the life of a Barrymore isn't worth the name."
AFTER THE BRAWL IS OVER—DIANA AND BOY FRIEND LEAVE HOSPITAL.

The brawl ended with her boyfriend of the moment, John McNeill, sprawled in Diana's bed with a split head, and her husband, Robert W. Wilcox, unemployed actor ordered out of the house. Wilcox had inflicted a bloody gash on the head of McNeill who described himself to the press as "a professional vagabond," despite his fashionable East Side address (414 East 65th Street).

Diana, not content to be involved with two men in one night, arrived at the brawl after a date with a neighborhood patrolman.

"I had a date with him because my husband bores me," Diana stated, adding that she met the policeman, "a couple of weeks ago when he was rambling through the building."

The fight in which McNeill was wounded apparently broke out after a quarrel between the two men over Diana's affections. Also injured in the fight was an attractive, but unidentified young lady who was out with Wilcox on the night in question.

By the time the party was over there was broken glass, kitchen knives, and squashed and smashed furniture all over the sumptuous Sutton Place flat. No charges were preferred though, as both sides probably felt that the less public questioning that went on, the better, all around.

When the fight was over both gallant gentlemen denied the slightest interest in Diana, and said they were fighting about something else. McNeill said he definitely wouldn't marry Diana, and Wilcox said that he doubted that things could be patched up.

Regarding the possibility of the reconciliation Diana said "If we could afford it, we might make a try, go off somewhere and fish, something we both love to do, but we haven't the money."

Fact: Diana and hubby are actually broke. Diana was working until recently as a part time lingerie salesgirl. Neither she nor her husband have worked at acting in years, and Diana's $30,000 inheritance from her mother, the mannish Michael Strange, n'c'e Blanche Oelrichs has long since been dissipated in drink and high living. Unfortunately it seems unlikely that Diana, who is now inclining to plumpness, will find a wealthy husband to pay the bills. Up to now she has shown a peculiar tendency to marry jobless or erratically employed young men.

Her last husband, John

Robert Howard a professional tennis player, was convicted earlier this year of violation of the Mann Act in "transporting a woman from Los Angeles to New York for prostitution, debauchery and other immoral purposes." He was also accused of buying an airplane ticket from Los Angeles to New York for a woman for the same purpose. First husband, Bramwell Fletcher, an actor, was married in 1942, divorced in 1946.

Other highspots in the fiery Diana's Career include:

1. The time she bopped pugnacious and bare-chested Lawrence Tierney, hero of scores of New York night-club brawls, at a party in Hollywood.

2. The time a ceiling fell on her head when she was minding her own business at home in bed. (She sued the landlord claiming $2,000 in medical expenses, and $5,000 loss of income in a period of 10 weeks.)

3. The time, two months after the incident above, when she fell down a flight of stairs and suffered a brain concussion, two black eyes, and a broken front tooth. Before she had returned from the hospital to which she had been taken by Wilcox, not yet her husband at the time, but living at the same address, gunmen broke into her apartment, tied Wilcox, and made off with two fur coats, $50 in cash and Wilcox' watch and camera.

4. The time she and Wilcox smashed up a car in Georgia rendering Diana unable to go on with the play in which both were supposed to appear.

5. The time she was eased out of Australia along with Wilcox after three theatrical managers broke engagements with her for a variety of reasons ranging from "no talent" to using offensive language on the stage. Diana got home and said things about Australia which even blistered news-men's ears.

TERROR IN OUR STREETS

A quiet city street, a nervous young man stands by the curb his hand inside his jacket. A couple pass him, total strangers, they glance at him—and sudden death strikes! He has a butcher knife in his hand, with violent passion he plunges into the stranger's stomach, cutting and tearing. Blood drenches the sidewalk as the cold-eyed youth turns to the screaming girl and, ignoring her pleas for mercy, plunges the blade again and again into her breast.

What causes this? Why does a quiet young man suddenly turn into a ravaging beast and kill at random until forcibly subdued, or killed himself?

This is not an unusual occurrence.

A check of your daily paper will prove that. With increasing frequency killers are appearing in our midst to maim and kill. These men are mentally sick, many are what psychiatrists call schizophrenic. They feel that the entire world is turned against them. They think they are being watched, spied upon. A schizoid may be totally harmless. He may also turn into a sudden killer. He hears voices, people talking about him. They are plotting to kill him. He must strike first in order to save himself.

What happens then is often unbelievable. The case of Howard Unruh is typical. An ex-sergeant, he had been a quiet soldier with a passion for firearms. He brooded, kept his troubles to himself until one day he could contain them no longer. With 'blazing guns he turned the streets of Camden, N. J. into a slaughter house. Before he was captured 13 people were dead and three more wounded.

This sudden death may strike at any time. These would-be killers live in our midst, brooding over their troubles and sharpening their weapons. The tensions and world fear worry them, their nerves grow taught and they ready their weapons in secret. Then one day something snaps and another berserk killer spreads terror in the streets.

CONFESSIONS OF A MODEL

By June King as told to the EDITOR

Editors note: anyone who has looked at books or magazines containing photo nudes has probably seen June King. She's one of the best known figure models in the country. When we heard that Miss King was leaving the modelling business, to marry and go west, we interviewed her with an eye toward getting the inside story on glamour modelling in America. The results were more than startling. In acid, concise words, Miss King lays open the inner workings of her business with some worthy notes and comments for girls who might be considering modelling as an occupation.

Q. Would you tell me, June, a little bit about your background?

A. Well, I was born in Knoxville, Tennessee. My father is a salesman. At 6, I started studying music, and then I learned piano and dancing. After I graduated from high school, I worked for the government, a little while. I got bored, and decided to go back to school. I registered at the Julliard school of music, where I graduated after four years.

Q. How did you get into modelling?

A. After I graduated, I did professional singing. At singing, you knocked yourself out for days at a time and made nothing a week. When someone asked me to take a crack at fashion modelling, I jumped at the chance. I suppose you'll want to know how I began modelling nude. Several reasons. For one thing, in fashion modelling you had to stay terribly thin, and that's always been hard for me. For another, competition was tough and it was hard to get steady work. Finally, fashion photographers are the biggest wolves in the business, and I wanted to get away from them. So I began posing for cheesecake.

Right here, I want to say that modelling isn't a glamorous field, as many think. It's a hard grind, and anybody is nuts who wants to become a model. I don't recommend it.

Q. You mention that fashion photographers have a habit of making passes. Would you say that this is a wide spread habit among photographers?

A. I certainly would. It's one of the worst things about the business. Fashion photographers and amateur photographers are the worst. Professional figure photographers are generally pretty straight. Oh well, I understand it's the same thing everywhere in show business. You know the gag about the casting couch.

Q. Tell me this. Aside from being wolves, do the photographers give the models a square deal?

A. Sometimes. But usually they try to gyp you, make you wait for your check, or try to lower the modelling fees.

This even happens with big companies.

Q. Tell me about some of your unusual experiences.

A. Oh, that's easy. There are so many. I remember once a man called and said he was a doctor. He had a rich patient who had almost been killed in an automobile accident a few years before, and while the man had recovered physically, he still suffered mentally. He had an inferiority complex of the worst order and he needed someone to boost his ego. He was under the care of a psychiatrist. The doctor said he was looking for a beautiful girl to go around to nightclubs with the man and make him feel like he was wanted. Good pay too, but it was just another way of pimping.

Modelling can be dangerous too. A man called one day, saying he was a photographer, and asked me to come that evening for a shooting date at a certain address. On a hunch, I checked the address. It was an abandoned warehouse.

Q. What about rackets? Did you run into many of them?

A. By the hundreds. Where shall I start? Do you want to know about pornographic pictures? New York is flooded with them. Models are always approached to pose for them. Once a model friend was offered $500 to pose in an indecent position with.

Rental studios ought to be exposed too. Here's how many of them work. A person in New York will have a studio which he'll rent to other photographers who haven't a studio. It seems legit, but what really happens is that half the photographers who come up don't know how to use a camera any more than I do. They come up there with the idea of meeting willing models, who are really prostitutes. It's just a call, house, files and all.

Photography classes have a lot of the same thing. They're a way of presenting a peep show. For $3 a guy can come up, on the surface to photograph a model, and look at a nude for an hour. After the sitting, the person in charge will come around and tell the guys he can get them fixed up for the night.

Q. What about fetishists? Perverts? Meet lots of them?

A. All the time. These guys who have such a great liking for the back view. They're fetishists. I posed for a psychiatrist once, who said he was a photographer. He wasn't. He just wanted to look. I had a fellow once who paid me one hundred dollars just to look at me undressed. He had no desire to touch me.

Perversion pornography, it's a million dollar business. Cameramen who shoot these sadism pictures, where girls are tied in chairs, and beaten by other girls, or chained up etc., don't have to pay any modelling fees. Guys come down and pay the modelling fees themselves just to watch.

Q. Let's go back to rackets. What other experiences concerning rackets can you tell me about?

The most prevalent racket, I think, in modelling is pimping, a practice that I believe has grown by leaps and bounds in the last few years. Once, an artist phoned me and told me to go down to a bookstore near Times Square, where there was a man who booked models. I went there. This fellow was a real Broadway character, who seemed to have money in every pocket. He said he knew all the movie stars, millionaires, people in show business, and got out a black book full of phone numbers to prove it. He told me he'd introduce me to a top sports broadcaster. Sure enough, two days later he did. His purpose was to deliver a batch of pornographic literature and a statue of two lesbians. They got a good price. The sportscaster — a very well known person — raved about the statue.

Everybody is in this racket — top stars, comics, diplomats, all kinds of people.

Q. Well, to sum it all up, what do you think about modelling?

A. Frankly?

Q. Of course.

A. Modelling is often nothing but a high class form of prostitution, which consists of a fast huck indiscreetly made. Sex, perversion, pimping, that's what you find in the modelling world.

SADISM

FOREMOST SEX PROBLEM WHY IS IT DANGEROUS?

Most cruel, vicious and dangerous of all psych problems bar none facing Americans today is dread sadism-masochism cycle. Fact: recent studies show sadism-masochism is sharply on rise here, is major threat to modern marriages, poses tough problem for civic leaders. Kinsey figures show only 6 out of 10 American women enjoy sex relations with husbands. These women turn in droves to erotic pleasures like sadism. And worse: sadism in sex accounts for many sensational murder cases. Question is, what is sadism-masochism? What causes condition? How can it be corrected?

Here is recent case where sadism and counterpart masochism led to death: in Minneapolis, police investigated death of woman, learned she had died through overdose of whipping. Further investigation proved woman was member of sadist club. Members would gather in room, undress, beat each other with riding whips. Among members were mother and son, and son's wife. Most amazing of all: members actually enjoyed brutal beating, got weird sexual delight in torture. And more: this case was no exception, hundreds like it are reported every year.

This is explanation for strange psych phenomenon: in case of masochists, those who like having pain inflicted upon them, pain is not really felt, is experienced as sex toned idea, brings pleasure. Thus, when masochist asks for and receives horrid flagellation, it is because he gets inverted pleasure from it, likes blows of cane or whip. Further: at basis of perversion is terrible fear of pain, secret to masochism. Masochists prove to selves again and again that pain is not to be feared, is pleasurable.

Here is actual quote from writings of a masochist: "My erotic wishes culminate even today in the desire for a very large, comely woman who will lay me across her knees or press me between her thighs and strike me upon the buttocks with a rattan cane or a riding whip and bid me, after the beating, to perform her will. If I disobey, I will receive another beating." This case, who could not experience normal sex relations, was gratified in his masochistic desires only by a young buxom girl with large buttocks, common delight of masochists.

Sadism takes name from writings of Frenchman, the Marquis de Sade, whose sex perversions were the talk of Paris two centuries ago. De Sade died in prison, incurably insane, but perverted sex habit persists. Actually, sadism and masochism have been known since beginning of man, but did not get identified until psych interest awoke. Sadism is condition where patient takes delight in inflicting pain on others, thrills to see loved one writhing under his blows. Masochism is opposite: when person enjoys being hurt. De Sade himself devised intricate methods of torture in order to satisfy his lust.

Explanation of sadism is this: sadist has great will to power, great capacity for cruelty. But on deeper level sadism is form, like masochism, of self hate projected into world. With brutality sadist is punishing self through punishing others, feels pain because of hurt to others, but experiences pain as pleasure. And more: sadism is expression of deepest possible insecurity, loathing of self, and is like masochism form of psychosexual infantilism. Sadist is actually at sex level of child, is retarded in psychological development.

Famous cult of sadists existed in Czarist Russia, called

IN BOTH CASES A SADIST GOT PLEASURE BRUTALIZING KIDS.

And more: sadism, when not turned to sex partner, frequently appears in punishments given to children. This aspect of sadism is most important, causes children to be psychological failures, often makes them sadists or masochists in later life. Here is recent case where punishment showed sadistic parents: police found three Arkansas youngsters locked on a 15 foot chain in back yard. Their offense: taking three nickels father had been saving. Such punishment showed father was sadist, tendencies perhaps heightened by poverty. Many parents without knowing it inflict punishments on children too grave for the offense, pave road to psychoanalyst for children when they grow up.

POLICE FOUND YOUNGSTERS CHAINED AND PADLOCKED FOR TAKING 15 CENTS FROM FATHER. PUNISHMENT IS CLEARLY SADISTIC.

12 YR. OLD FARM WIFE SHOWS POSITION IN WHICH SHE WAS OFTEN CHAINED BY SADIST HUSBAND. WAS SHE MASOCHIST TO SUBMIT?

Sadism and masochism also mar marriages. Recent case where husband chained wife to bedpost when going out showed sadist disposition of husband, masochism of wife. Worst of it is people make their lives living hell without realizing what unconscious urges they follow.

Sadism is all too common today. Atrocious murders are usually committed by lunatic sadists who should be in institution. Brutal beatings and even fights by bar bullies are sadistic in nature. Why is condition so widespread? Answer is that modern living creates much of sadism. Frenzied commercial competition causes men to be cruel to survive. Fear of war, depression, high divorce rate, causes men to be insecure, causes development to stop at early age, causes sadist and masochist tendencies.

Conclusion: sadism and masochism are unhealthy and dangerous. These perverts seem to experience pleasure through pain, but actually only get pleasure through twisted ideas. Actual physical sex enjoyment is barred to them, they cannot experience it. And more: in trying to gratify selves, sadists will hurt, sometimes kill others, masochists will get hurt, sometimes get killed. Neither can make stable citizens, make lasting marriages.

But condition not hopeless. Modern psychiatry is equipped to help, sometimes cure patients. Trouble is, psychiatrists too expensive, knowledge that patient can get help not widespread enough. (This is the first in a series of exciting articles on American psychological problems. Exclusive tells you the real facts behind the nympho—mania problem, sodomy, incest, all straight from the shoulder.)

Misinformed rumors to the contrary, psychiatry had done tremendous good for those who need it. But as with every human advance, right along with the good comes evil. Nowhere is this more true than with psychiatry. A jackal has come upon the scene, preying on the helpless, the ignorant, the lonely. Statistics show that tremendous

This is how the racket works: many don't know how to find a psychiatrist, or can't get one due to the doctors overcrowded schedule. Sometimes, too, they cannot afford the steep fee above board psychiatrists often ask. They are ripe for the phony.

BW? RUMORS OF EXPERIMENTAL WORK IN KOREA ON BW MAY NOT BE UNFOUNDED. RUSSIANS HAVE QUANTITIES OF DISEASE GERMS.

INVISIBLE DEATH

GERMS MAKE H-BOMB OBSOLETE

The atom bomb is obsolete, and H-bomb is secondary killer. More terrifying, insidious, deadlier by far is BW-biological (germ) warfare. Despite mantle of secrecy, frightened officials have let the facts leak out. Germs reveal a destructive potential exceeding anything formerly dreamed of by scientific death specialists. That is not all: new experiments indicate germ's lethal power has only been tapped. If war comes, we can expect BW.

Compare A-bomb with BW attack on New York. In the opinion of specialists, a great number of bombs would be needed to force city's evacuation. Many bombers would have to pierce air defenses. With BW an infinitesimal amount of poison correctly distributed could turn city into morgue at one stroke.

Here is story: BW, deadliest known form of warfare, has already been tested on humans. Nazis spread cholera in Italy, Japs bombed Chinese town with bubonic plague. Though used on small scale with poor techniques, results were horrifying.

U. S. has been interested since 1941, experimented actively since 1944. Of 70 disease germs studied, 33 are adaptable to war. Here are major types enemy will use: besides cholera, typhus, smallpox, anthrax, and glanders, there is melioidosis, for which we have no cure. Pneumonic (air borne bubonic) plague, almost invariably causes death. Psittacosis, hard to diagnose, no antidote. Botulinus, a bacteriological poison. One ounce will kill 200,000,000.

Also, in this Pandora's box of modern science are laboratory developed germs absolutely new on earth. No one would survive them.

How BW works: germs can be spread in dozens of ways from migratory birds to flit gun in crowded subway. It is undetectable. Most effective: aerosol bomb detonated in city's water supply. Aerosol (or spray) techniques will spread germs without usual stages necessary for infection. VD, for instance, could be contracted without human contact, person would not know what disease he had. With other gruesome sicknesses it would be same thing. Yellow fever, polio, leprosy, TB, and even cancer could infect the population.

That's not all. Livestock, crops are affected too. Farmer could wake in morning, hear on radio city cousins are all dead in Chicago, a ghost town. Outside, farmer finds no cows to milk, crops brown and withered in fields. He has no food to send to city graveyards. Those surviving BW attack would perish by starvation.

Danger lies not so much in attacking aircraft, but in home laboratories. Stuff is simply made: any distillery now engaged in making alcoholic liquors could easily be converted to production of disease germs.

Danger is real: recent untrue Chinese BW charges against U. S. show tense world attitude. Four Russian labs producing germs are known to be in existence. In one, a broken test tube full of bubonic plague caused death of entire staff. Near Pyongyang in North Korea, U. S. found abandoned Russian lab full of diseased and starving experimental animals. Russians know plenty about BW.

According to U. S. top germ specialist, Dr. Theodor Roseburg, in event of war BW is "likely to be used. There is little doubt it would be effective." Invisible germs would be impossible to detect until too late, not enough doctors to handle cases; rare or unknown diseases would defy treatment.

What is U. S. doing? At Camp Detrick, Md., biggest biological lab in world, 3,900 scientists are desperately at work. In case of attack, they have developed electrified pure water spray to protect buildings, new germ proof uniforms. There is an epidemic service in key areas guarding not only people but livestock and crops. In case of retaliation by us, we have uncovered higher potency germs capable of infecting even the immunized. There is a new fog-laying machine which sprays out particles in drops smaller than 5 millionths of an inch. If drops were larger, tiny hairs in human nose would keep them from being breathed.

But are U. S. defenses adequate? Dr. Walter J. Nungester, Pres. American Society to Bacteriologists says no. Too much important information withheld from defense scientists, not enough money for them to work. U. S. is terribly vulnerable. Wildfire epidemics caused by unknown germs could greatly reduce population overnight.

Hence, quote from Dr. Brock Chisholm, Interim Dir. General of World Health Organization: "BW could eliminate more than 50% of human life in a continental population against which it is directed. Therefore, the atomic bomb is obsolete."

Will anyone use BW? Russia is big and unprotected, slim in medical resources, but probably as advanced as we in BW research. U. S. won't attack first with BW, but may retaliate. If war comes, if BW is used; new vistas of horror for mankind.

But not so with Dane Garrell and her friend Jewell Grossen. As our camera shows, they had an Exclusive hen party—just the two of them were invited—and for a whole day long the girls cavorted in the sun and had a marvellous time. What's more: there wasn't a man around.

The situation became more amusing when Dane, a petite

At the end of the day, luscious Jewell had a chance to show what her idea of fun was. The rippling waters of the pool awaited, and never was a swim so wonderful.

400 U. S. PROPOSALS RECEIVED BY GERMAN WOMAN WHO CLAIMED "BOSOM LIKE JANE RUSSELL, LEGS LIKE BETTY GRABLE."

Heartless parasites who prey on loneliness shake down thousands of mate-seekers every year. Experts estimate swindle may come to $10 million a year. Technique is to answer ads placed by widows, spinsters looking for husbands, borrow money after whirlwind courtship, skip town. Sometimes swindlers place own ads, select most likely victim from clues in replies. Both sexes come in for their share of heart-ache instead of heart-throb: lady swindlers trap prosperous businessmen and farmers. Fly-by-night matrimonial agencies make organized racket out of making "lonely hearts" who seek marriage. Sometimes, swindler is led to murder by complicated situation.

Countless swindlers were detected by Post Office Inspection Service, convicted of using mails to defraud. Postal authorities have been on warpath against them for a whole century. Racketeers traced by their letters to prospective victims. Pamphlets and little newspapers circulated by phony matrimonial agencies are investigated. But nothing can prevent a middle-aged, 200 pound woman from inserting ad calling herself "a baffful little armful." At least 300 agencies in the field, some of them legitimate. Subscribers number 500,000, including lonely people 80 years of age.

Here are actual cases of "lonely hearts" swindlers who were caught:

Case 1. Man posed as traveling salesman. He followed up on ads, prepared his route in advance. After contacting victim, he pretended to lose traveler's checks. Within a few hours, he produced telegram from alleged firm: "$500,000 deal pending. Essential you be here within 48 hours." Swindler allowed himself to be talked out of "reluctance" to accept money from a woman, left town with $200 and promise to return soon.

Caught in next town after postal authorities inserted ad which led to date with policewoman. In his traveling bag were found 100 letters from women in 11 states. Man got 2½ years in jail for using mails to defraud.

Case 2. Man with very distinctive appearance: bald head, like prize egg. He should have been easy to trace, but postal inspectors could not find him, eventually discovered he wore wig and fur coat, dressed as woman during railroad jaunts. Then agents followed up on complaint, nabbed him. Man had made touches of $1,200 in Washington, total of $7,500 in Philadelphia. Result: 20 months to 5 years in prison.

Case 3. Peer of all swindlers was 64-year old woman. She kept from 30 to 40 men on string at a time, used her ten children to handle correspondence. Operated out of Washington, wrote only to men west of Mississippi to prevent surprise visits. To prospective victims, this attractive lady sent photo of her daughter, said she was only in early twenties. "Daughter" requested money by mail for "dear old Mother", who was always sick with asthma, tuberculosis, appendicitis, needed medical care and treatment.

If sucker arranged trip to Washington, "Mother" met him at station, said "daughter" had contracted sudden illness, gone to Florida for treatment, would return in few days. Would-be suitor was asked to defray costs. He usually left a poorer, but not necessarily wiser man.

The "Grand Old Lady of the Lonely Hearts Racket" was finally caught when usually efficient system got crossed up by phone call. "Mother" went to Chicago to inspect suitor for "daughter". But gentleman had called Washington, was told his intended mate was in Chicago.

When "Mother" arrived in Windy City, she said "daughter" was in Washington. Suitor listened patiently, excused himself, called police. Infamous career brought to an end after four years with jail sentence of 20 months to 5 years.

Many middle-aged and elderly persons who lost mates or never married strive for companionship. Those who have ample savings are most liable to be sucked in by callous individuals, who exploit this human desire. Protection under the law is precarious at best: using mails to defraud is only charge possible against these swindlers. Lone wolves are hard to catch, matrimonial agencies somewhat easier.

Solution: Exclusive believes people must be educated not to send money to strangers, be wary about people they contact through ads. Also, if using matrimonial agencies, clients should patronize those requiring references.

Victims of the "Lonely Hearts" racket: should overcome understandable feelings of sheepishness, complain to Post Office, help government track down fraudulent suitors.

Congress: should make bigger appropriations for Post Office Inspection Service, now very understaffed.

SKIRT BLOWER'S SUMMER

Consistently neglected in discussions of interesting jobs is that of a Skirt Blower at an Amusement park. He's the man that operates that devilish compressed air nozzle at the funhouse — according to some, the principal attraction of that zany maze.

At first this would seem to be ideal summer employment, — a breezy location near the sea, with an opportunity for exercise, and an unsurpassed view. To check on this Exclusive interviewed several men involved in the skirt-blowing trade at Rockaway's Playland. According to them the game has its compensations — but there are drawbacks too.

For one thing, you have to deal with hot-blooded girls who lose their tempers when a gust of cold-damp air is shot unexpectedly under their skirts. (The airjet often contains condensed moisture and comes out like a cold spray.)

Then there are boy friends who feel that the sight of their sweetie's undies is one to be reserved for more private occasions.

Generally, though, the victims take the blower's activities in good spirits. In many cases, the boy friend or husband cooperates to the extent of holding his lady's arms, so she can't pull her skirts down too quickly. This, sometimes leads to very embarrassing moments — especially during the hot spells, when many young ladies cool off by deleting certain items of underclothing.

The interesting part of the job is the reaction of the gals when their skirts go woosh! Some get hysterical and move around in a completely insane and helpless fashion. Others clutch immediately for the front of their dresses leaving the back to blow over their heads. Some of the shrewder ones just cover their faces and let the winds blow where they may.

All in all it's the breeziest job in town, but in case you're thinking of quitting your own job to take over, Exclusive points out that the pay runs about 75 cents an hour.
